Both vehicles were traveling in the same direction about four miles south of here near the Porterville Community when the accident occurred.

Faubus Hits Back at His Opponents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Orval E. Faubus struck back at his four opponents in the Democratic primary yesterday in speeches at July Fourth political rallies.

All four of the candidates opposing Faubus' bid for a fourth term used the rallies to add to their attacks against the governor.

Faubus, in a speech at Portia, charged that H. E. Williams once branded some welfare programs as socialistic, accused Joe E. Hardin of having "ties to the integration forces in Little Rock," linked Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett with a National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and alleged that oil stock sold by Hal Millsap Jr. had declined in value.

Williams, at Portia, called for a "new Declaration of Independence by the voters of Arkansas from the dictatorship that has been established over them." He also accused Faubus of "playing politics" with welfare rolls and renewed a charge that the governor once ordered integration of two state colleges.

Millsap, speaking at Corning and Piggott, said, "The government of Arkansas needs to be brought back to the people and taken out of the hands of a small group of men with interests in the Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. and the Arkansas Power & Light Co." Bennett charged that Faubus had pledged to not sign tax increase bills, but that all state taxes have increased. He also said, at Portia, "I'm simply not going to put up with any integration in the state of Arkansas."

Hardin continued to hammer at the threat he said was posed by the control of the state government by Faubus would have if elected to a fourth term. He spoke at Piggott and Corning.

Faubus said that stock sold by Millsap for $1 a share was now listed at 7 cents a share. Millsap and his father are named in a four million dollar suit by some stockholders of their Millsap Oil & Gas Co., but Millsap has charged the suit was politically inspired.

Williams, Faubus said, had called welfare programs, public power and health programs for veterans socialistic. He asked what Williams' attitude would be toward integration.

Bennett, who has sought to link Faubus with Mrs. Daisy Bates and the Arkansas NAACP head, probably knows, Mrs. Bates better than he. Faubus said. He said he had met Mrs. Bates only twice.

Hardin, the governor contended, was linked with integration in Little Rock when the subject first came up. He said Hardin was tied with Little Rock integration.

Bennett at Portia said that the South to partly cloudy last groups.

Portia, tonight and Wednesday scattered showers and thunderstorms, not so warm would go and there would be any time that pressure and pork barrel tactics have prevailed.

Bennett also attacked Faubus' action last year overturning his veto of a public works money bill, often called a pork barrel because it covers pet projects of many senators and House members.

Sugar Ban to Bring More Castro Seizures

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro's cabinet ministers met into the early morning hours today. They were believed drafting orders for seizure of American property to be issued when President Eisenhower cuts the Cuban sugar quota.

Eisenhower was expected to act promptly on the authority Congress gave him to suspend all or part of the still unfilled 1960 quota of Cuban sugar imported into the United States. Eisenhower can also reduce or suspend the American purchases of Cuban sugar at premium prices for the first three months of 1961.

In retaliation, the bearded Cuban revolutionary has threatened to take over the property of Americans "down to the nails of their shoes."

The ministers met at the presidential palace at 2 p. m. Monday. Some were still in the square, while three-story buildings at midnight. An official told newsmen they no announcements would be made and they could go home.

While the ministers were conferring, Conrado Bequer, head of Cuba's half-million sugar workers, told his forces to stand already to seize the 36 sugar mills in Cuba owned by Americans. The Castro regime already has taken over almost all American-owned agricultural land.

Castro's official family exuded confidence the government would of the island's three foreign oil shortage arising from the seizure of the island's three foreign oil refineries and the companies' cut-off in Cuba's normal supply of Venezuelan oil.

The nation, apprehensive and hungry for news, was told that many tankers have been offered to bring Soviet crude oil here under the oil-for-sugar barter agreement signed with the Soviet Union.

Authoritative sources said eight tankers, owned or chartered by the Communists, are rushing a total of 60,000 tons of Soviet crude oil to bolster the dwindling stocks at the refineries. This represents about a week's supply for Cuba, which has little hydroelectric or coal facilities and depends on oil for most of its power.

One of the eight tankers was a big new Chinese Communist ship. The 19,500-ton Peking, which Moscow radio Monday said was being readied for an oil run to Cuba.

A few hours later a tanker named Peking collided with a Norwegian tanker off the coast of Tunisia. French officials at Bizerte said they were informed the tanker was Russian and was carrying Soviet oil for Cuba, but Lloyd's Register of ships lists only the Chinese Communist tanker of that name.

WATCH OUT — HERE COMES HANK — AGAIN — Hank Krajewski, perennial presidential hopeful for his own "Poor Man's Party," poses with a porky pal in his sticker-bedecked car. The New Jersey pig farmer plans to visit both Los Angeles and Chicago while a couple other political parties hold their conventions.

EATON GETS LENIN PEACE AWARD — Cleveland, Ohio industrialist Cyrus Eaton, left, is pinned with the Lenin Peace Prize medal at Pugwash, Nova Scotia. Making the award is Mrs. A. Aroutunian, wife of the Soviets' ambassador to Canada.

South Korea Opens Trials Against 27

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea today opened the first of a series of trials against 27 persons associated with the deposed government of former President Syngman Rhee. All are accused of a range of offenses allegedly committed during the last days of the Rhee regime.

Thirty leaders of the Rhee party including five top government officials headed by former Home Minister Choi In-kyoo, were charged in today's opening trials in Seoul District Court with rigging the March 15 election.

Students who toppled the Rhee government in nationwide uprisings last April joined as the defendants were taken from prison to the courtroom.

More than 1,300 national and military policemen were posted around the court to forestall possible disturbances.

Today's trial is to be followed Wednesday by another of all defendants.

Kishi Wins 2nd Round in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Premier Nobusuke Kishi's ruling Liberal Democratic party was jubilant today over its second decisive victory in four days in a gubernatorial election.

Incumbent Hiroshi Kurihara, 60, was re-elected Sunday by a wide margin in Saitama prefecture bordering Tokyo. Kurihara polled almost twice as many votes as his two Socialist opponents, who ran on a platform attacking the Japan-U.S. security treaty.

Iwao Yamakazi also was re-elected easily on Friday against Socialist opponents who campaigned on the same party platform. Yamakazi is governor of Aomori, the northern province of Japan's central island of Honshu.

Both Aomori and Saitama prefectures are conservative strongholds and victories were expected for the Liberal Democrats. But the newspaper Asahi, Japan's biggest and a vigorous opponent of Kishi, said the results were a setback.

Johnson Announces His Candidacy for Demo Nomination

Kennedy Says No to Truman's Suggestion

By GERALD MILLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. John F. Kennedy has replied with an emphatic "no" to Harry Truman's suggestion that he drop out of the presidential race for 1960.

"I do not intend to step aside at anyone's request," the Massachusetts Democrat declared Monday.

"I was the only candidate to risk my chances in all the primaries — the only one to visit every state."

Kennedy, 43, told nationwide television and radio audience he is ready for the presidency because a new generation of leadership is needed to cope with new problems and new opportunities.

After reading a prepared statement, he answered questions at a news conference.

Thus the front-runner in the Democratic party nomination race replied to the former president's statements that he is too young and inexperienced for the nation's highest office.

"I have encountered and survived every kind of hazard and opposition," Kennedy emphasized. "I do not intend to withdraw my name now, on the eve of the convention."

Truman made his charge Saturday and threw in the implication that the party's nominating convention, which opens July 11 in Los Angeles, seemed rigged in Kennedy's favor.

To that, the senator replied: "To the extent that I have anything to do it, it will be an open convention."

Former New York Gov. W. Averell Harriman, supported for president by Truman in 1956, and Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin said they felt the reply would win Kennedy new support.

At Independence, Mo., Truman stated he didn't watch the Kennedy telecast and couldn't comment.

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, a contender for the nomination who has echoed Truman's charges of a stacked convention, also declined immediate comment.

Two Negroes Held in Fatal Stabbing

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — Two Negroes are being questioned in connection with the fatal stabbing of J. C. Meeks, 55, of Junction City.

Arthur Lewis Hinton of El Dorado and Ruston, La., was arrested at Ruston and Herbert Finely of El Dorado was arrested here. No charges have been filed.

Three Negroes fled in a car after Meeks was stabbed to death at a roadhouse near Junction City Saturday night. One Negro stabbed Meeks, a second held bystanders at bay with a pistol and the third was in the car, authorities said.

Texas Senate Leader Makes It Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas announced his candidacy today for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Texas senator—long recognized as a bidder for the nomination—finally made it formal and official at a news conference.

His announcement came just six days before the opening of the Democratic convention in Los Angeles, and signals a stretch drive by his supporters to stem the momentum gained by Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"To applause from an obviously pro-Johnson crowd of spectators, the Texan told a packed news conference in the auditorium of the Senate Office Building: "I am of this moment a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president of the United States."

Johnson said he had withheld an announcement up to today because "somebody had to lend the store," referring to his duties as the Democratic chief in the Senate.

In that connection Johnson without mentioning names, said those who have been campaigning actively for the nomination, have missed "hundreds" of the important votes.

His obvious targets were Kennedy and Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, chief rivals for the party selection.

Johnson said he understood he would have many supporters on the first ballot, many more on the second and that some had told him he would be nominated on the third.

"Whether that will be true, I cannot say," he added.

Johnson said he was not going to push aside other candidates for the nomination, that he is only going to ask the American people to look hard and long for the right man.

Johnson prefaced his formal announcement with a comment that since the drive for delegate commitments began the job of the presidency to which the candidates aspire has changed tremendously.

He recalled the series of events through which Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has chilled the cold war still further and told his audience of newsmen that in the world of the immediate future there will be "no mercy for inexperience, no gallantry toward youth."

This appeared to be a shaft aimed at Kennedy, the target Saturday for criticism from former

Arkansas' Death Toll Held to 3

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Marmaduke woman was injured fatally in a highway collision last night, raising to three the number of persons killed in Arkansas road accidents during the Independence Day weekend.

Two fatalities occurred Sunday. State Police safety officials had predicted as many as five Arkansans might die on the state's highways during the holiday period. The long weekend began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight last night.

Mrs. R. W. Henley, 56, of Marmaduke, was dead on arrival at a Paragould hospital after the collision on Highway 1, about 1 1/2 miles south of Marmaduke.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, Henley, and the driver of the other auto, Floyd Brickey, 22, of Hickory Ridge, were hospitalized with injuries at Paragould.

State Trooper Charles Hampton said apparently Henley lost control of his car and it swerved into the one driven by Brickey.

Ads Urging Faubus Head South Bloc

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The second of a series of advertisements urging Gov. Orval E. Faubus to head a Southern bloc at the National Democratic Convention at Los Angeles this month appeared in the Arkansas Gazette today.

The ads are aimed directly at Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, the Senate majority leader, but with apparent side shots at Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the apparent front runner for the Democratic nomination for president.

Today's advertisement was signed only by George L. Singleton of Charleston, S. C. who was not further identified.

The first advertisement, which appeared yesterday, was signed by 14 Louisianians, several of them well known integration and states rights leaders.

Both advertisements attacked Johnson for his civil rights stand and his alleged anti-Southern bias. Kennedy was described as boasting that "he hopes to get the Democratic nomination without a single Southern vote."

"We look in this hour," today's advertisement said, "to the one man who has said he would rather go down in defeat while fighting for the right than be triumphant in tyranny."

Governor Faubus, our cause is in your hands," the ad concluded.

Pressure for Pay Raises Flayed by Ike

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP) — Under last-minute pressure, Congress Friday swept aside President Eisenhower's veto and enacted $746 million a year in pay boosts for 1 1/2 million federal workers.

It was only the second Eisenhower veto out of 1960 to be overridden.

Most Republicans sided against the President, who called the bill indefensible and struck hard at what he said were flagrant political pressures for it.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty telephone Eisenhower at Gettysburg, Pa., and then declared "this is the second time that pressure and pork barrel tactics have prevailed."

Hagerty's statement alluded to Congress' action last year overturning his veto of a public works money bill, often called a pork barrel because it covers pet projects of many senators and House members.

Park Cleared of Racial Disorders

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — A Mississippi sheriff, acting under a new state law to head off racial conflict cleared out Negroes and white persons from a federal park play area.

Harrison County Sheriff Curtis Dedden and 20 deputies Monday ordered both groups out of DeSoto National Park north of here after a disagreement over use of a ball diamond. There was no violence.

"It appeared to be a well-planned effort to integrate the park," the sheriff said. Though the dispute occurred on federal land, the recreation area historically has been used by white persons.

Dedden said he thought reports Negroes would try to integrate the beaches over the July Fourth weekend was a smoke screen.

"This was the integration play in mind and not the beaches," he said.

Kessler Air Force Base ordered military men in uniform during off hours. Officials would not confirm the move was connected with the racial situation.

Some Air Force men were beaten during a racial flareup on the Gulf Coast earlier this year when Negroes attempted to use the beaches. Several Negroes and white persons were shot.

COUNTERFEIT

GENTLEMAN

by CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND

By Clarence Budington Kelland
THE STORY: Jack Roche, daughter of an eccentric rancher, has developed an interest in Artemus Baldwin not knowing that he is an undercover man for the Secret Service. She suspects he is not what he pretends to be — a rather shady character of the underworld fringe. She and other friends join Artemus at the races.

Chapter VII

"I like the races," she said, with a bewildering change of subject, "but I do not like to bet."

"Why not?" he asked.

"Because," she said, "it doesn't work out."

"He laughed naturally. 'There is an element of chance,' he admitted. 'But I will show you that sometimes there is not an element of chance and that sometimes, if you are smart and know the right people, there isn't a gamble.'

"You mean chicanery?" she asked.

"That," he said, "is a very elegant word and I wish I was hep to what it means. I will now write the name of a horse in a certain race and fold the paper, and you will put it in your hand-bag. And I will bet a five-spot for you on that horse."

Walker Bayside, who seemed to have been engaged in animated conversation with the young lady beside him, turned to Artemus and asked jocularly, "An experiment in second sight, Mr. Baldwin?"

"No," Jack said, "a demonstration of inside information."

Artemus turned to look at the artist. He saw a man in his early forties, handsome, with hairline mustache and gray eyes. His six feet of body showed no signs of softness or of the inroads of middle age.

"Was that," Artemus asked coldly, "a nasty crack?"

"Indeed not," Bayside said

promptly. "A tribute to person- ally."

The Secret Service man knew that he and this handsome artist were not destined to be friends. His eyes dropped to Bayside's left hand, which rested on the back of the chair. It was a strong, hand-muscular, with spatulate fingers. His brows drew together slightly as, trained to note details, he saw the man's thumb nail. Careful manhandling had not been able to conceal that it was marked by a numerous tiny nicks or pinpricks.

"Sometimes," Artemus said bleakly, "tributes don't set so good."

The stands fell silent; necks were craned toward the gate. "They're off!" said the announcer and commenced to call the race. The eight horses flashed past, closely grouped; at the turn they were less closely bunched. The favorite drew ahead. He was a length ahead as they turned into the stretch. Then a shout went up, not exactly a shout of joy, as a roan horse made its move. A hundred yards short of the finish line he overtook the favorite, drew ahead and crossed a winner by a full length.

"That dog!" Bayside said ruefully, and tore up his ticket.

"Look in your bag, Miss Roche," Artemus said, using only the corner of his mouth. Jack took out the paper on which Artemus had written, and unfolded it.

"Susy's Boy in the third," she read.

"Pays eighteen-fifty," Artemus said. "Just shows the difference between investing and betting."

"Forty-six dollars and a quarter," Jack was a lightning calculator.

"Less," Artemus said, "the five I bet for you."

"When one bets for a lady —" Bayside said, not genially, but Artemus interrupted brusquely.

"When one bets for a lady," he said, "she pays like a man."

"Maybe in your set," Bayside said.

"She still wins forty-one, two bits," Artemus related. "How much you made for her today?"

"Jack was evening the two men. Any more sure things?" Bayside asked.

"The horses," answered Artemus, "only talk to me once a day."

Before he sought a place to dine, he wrote a brief note to Newman Wessler, addressed to the Federal building. "The artist, Walker Bayside," it said, "has nicks on his left thumb nail."

Artemus Baldwin, expecting no mail, therefore, when he found a letter awaiting him at his motor court address, he was surprised. He had been trained to be suspicious of the unexpected. So, he opened the envelope, he examined it meticulously. The return address on the upper-left-hand corner was that of the Westward Ho Hotel. His own name and the name of the motor court where he lived were typewritten, the letters black and clear-cut, indicating a new ribbon and either a new or well-cared-for machine. The stamp was placed exactly in the upper right-hand corner. He had no apparatus to examine for fingerprints.

Only when Artemus had exhausted the possibilities of the exterior did he slit the envelope open. Inside was nothing but a ticket without accompanying letter — a ticket to next afternoon's ball game between the Cleveland Indians and the San Francisco Giants at the Phoenix ball park.

Evidently someone, for some purpose, wanted him to attend that ball game. It might be Newman Wessler, the Secret Service agent in charge, but Artemus did not think that was the case. He was quite sure that if Wessler had sent the ticket of admission there would have been an accompanying explanation or instructions.

Chapter VIII

In the morning, he arose, showered, put on his natty over-styled suit, arranged carefully a handkerchief in his breast pocket and drove downtown to breakfast in the coffee shop of the Adams Hotel.

As he sat there he saw ballplayers whose faces had been made familiar to him on the fence of a sort of junkyard sporting pages; there were cow-boys in high-heeled ornate boots and dungarees and jockey-hats; there were winter visitors and traveling men, Eastern young women in gaudy shirts and trousers. It was an entertaining but not a mixture of authentic West and of expensive imitations.

His attention was directed to a couple who emerged from the elevator and walked toward the Central Avenue entrance. They would have attracted glances anywhere or in any company. The man was in his sixties, with whitening hair and goatee beard. His suit was of immaculate white flannel. He wore a gray sombrero with a tooled-leather band that must have cost nearer to a hundred than to $50. He was tall, inches over six feet in stature — the very ideal of an aristocratic, unconstructed Southern gentleman. The girl who accompanied him was also tall, with a wealth of brown hair that verged upon auburn. She carried her shoulders erectly. Her cheekbones were high, with flat planes beneath, and her skin seemed never to have been touched by wind or sun. She moved with that grace possible only to one whose body is perfection. Her face, her bearing, was as aristocratic as that of the elderly man who accompanied her, but somehow the aristocracy a bit severe on the man was, in her, mitigated by a certain pleasant demureness, an aliveness of the eyes and a smile that hinted at keen appreciation of humor. Artemus guessed then to be father and daughter, and his eyes followed them with admiration until they disappeared into the street.

Artemus lingered another quarter of an hour; then he strolled out.

Artemus stopped to watch some kids playing in a vacant lot. Porque the Egg approached him from behind, made a gesture of greeting as he passed, and asked out of the corner of his mouth, "Got it?"

"Sure," Artemus answered without turning his head.

"Tail me," Porque whispered.

Artemus allowed his friend half a block of lead and followed. Porque turned south. From a narrow space between a tumble-down house and the high fence of a sort of junkyard Porque spoke. "Slin me," he said.

Artemus, glancing behind at the empty street, turned in to the narrow way. He handed Porque the small roll of bills which represented his winnings from the two-dollarous. It was an entertaining but not a mixture of authentic West and of expensive imitations.

"You just happen along," Artemus asked.

"Now," Porque answered. "Everybody knows you're prowling." He peered up at Artemus like a grateful puppy. "You know that stuff?" he asked.

"What stuff?"

"The one you found."

"What about him?"

"The cops," said Porque, "have tied a name to him. He's Sweet Lips Chavez."

"What about him?"

"Worked the Yaqui-gold racket. Done a year's time. He played Injun good."

Artemus had heard vaguely of the Yaqui-gold swindle, but made a note to familiarize himself with the ins and outs of it.

"Burps 'n' Moose got orders to lay off," Porque said.

Artemus sneered. "Turn 'em loose," he said. "Any time. Any time."

"See you," Porque said hopefully. "I scam this way." He pointed to the back of the lot, and with surprising agility made his way to the fence and scrambled over.

The crowd was beginning to assemble at the ball park. Artemus did not enter at once. He stood by the little ticket office, watching the crowd as it stungled in. When game time approached, he presented his ticket and passed the gates.

As he sat down in the box he was conscious of a faint but lovely perfume, and then of a tall, spare man dressed in white. As they settled themselves in their chairs, he saw that it was the couple who had walked through the lobby of the Adams Hotel that morning — the unmistakably Southern gentleman with the goatee and his beautiful, demure daughter.

Before the first half inning ended, another party entered the box on the right. They were Jack Roche, the artist, Walker Bayside, a man past middle age whom Jack addressed as Pops, and two young women and a man whom Artemus never before had seen. They carried cushions. The usher dusted the chairs and received a tip. Jack occupied the seat at the left, separated only by the rail from Artemus. She looked at him unsmilingly.

"Well," she said, "you do pop up."

"Who pops up," asked Mr. Roche, standing to look at Artemus.

"Man by the name of Baldwin," Jack said, and then, "Mr. Baldwin, my father."

"Charmed," Artemus said. "He's always charmed," Jack said critically.

Hell and Paradise

LANSING, Mich., (AP) — A Montreal woman asking directions to Hell, Mich., was counseled today to visit Paradise as well.

Mrs. E. Cartmell wrote the State Highway Department, explaining she planned a visit to the Detroit area and "we thought it would be fun to be able to say we had been to Hell."

The department responded by mailing a marked map showing the location of Hell, a tiny unincorporated community.

"To complete your trip you might also visit Paradise in upper Michigan," suggested John Takacs in an accompanying message.

Little Doubt of Changes in Russia

Editor's Note—When William L. Ryan visited the Soviet Union seven years ago the terror of Lavrenty Beria, Stalin's chief policeman, still was fresh in mind. Revisiting Moscow, Ryan found some changes — and some things not changed at all. This is the last of a series of five articles.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

"You were here seven years ago? Do you notice changes?"

The young Muscovite waits anxiously for the reply. He seems fiercely proud of the changes.

One of the most striking is the apparent absence of the old fear, of the dread of nearby informers, of the suspicious shunning of foreigners — feelings that prevailed before Stalin died in 1953.

The relaxed attitude is most notable among young people who remember little of Stalin. They are giving old Moscow a new look. Many are far better dressed than the Muscovite of 1953. They display lively interest in the outside world. Many try to copy Western customs and manners.

To the Westerner, this emulation of his ways often seems awkward and self-conscious.

Saturday night couples in crowded restaurants shuffle laboriously about the dance floor to old American tunes, as if grimly determined to have a good time.

Laughing, singing crowds of young people pour from the Moskva River excursion boats of a weekend evening, dressed in summer best, relaxed after a day in the sun. Many come from families of above-average income, or have well-paying jobs with little to do with their money but seek good times.

Constantly, visiting Americans are asked for copies of American newspapers or magazines. Young people love to look at the advertisements. They also are intensely interested in news from the West.

and will go to extremes to get it. A group of American students was strolling along a Leningrad street one night. Suddenly, a Russian bumped into an American girl, knocking her into the road. Apologetically, the Russian admitted he did it on purpose. He spoke English, and wanted to talk.

A young Soviet mother, chatting with Americans, casually asked for empty American cigarette packages. Particularly, she wanted a package bearing the name of the cigarettes smoked by Francis Gary Powers, the captured pilot. A picture of the package had appeared in the Soviet press as one of Powers' effects.

"The boys call them 'razvedchik' (intelligence agent) cigarettes," she said.

Such goings-on would be unthinkable seven years ago. The boldness of the writers who held services for author Beria.

The regime may be a little worried about people. It has been in the rules of morality. Kiosks once dispensed to weary workmen gone. Seldom does a spoiled young of better ministers staggering drunk parties.

But much of Moscow the same as it was of Stalin's death.

"OLDS IS THE BEST BUY IN THE MEDIUM PRICE CLASS!"

Liberty Island Now
NEW YORK (AP)—Now it's Liberty Island which is the home of the Statue of Liberty.

In ceremonies Wednesday, the old name of Bedloe's Island disappeared. The renaming had been approved in a bill by the 84th Congress and signed by President Eisenhower.

Mrs. W. E. White left Saturday for Houston, Tex., to join her sister, Miss Mary Greening, in a Mexican vacation which will include Mexico City and Acapulco.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. White, Jr. went to Coffeyville, Kan., the 4th of July weekend to visit her mother, Mrs. J. R. Bonds.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lester and sons of Little Rock spent the holiday weekend with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lester. Edward Lester will be the featured speaker at the Hempstead County Bar Assn. meeting Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl O'Neal returned Friday from a European trip and were welcomed home by their son Jerry, the Jack Gardner family, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robins, III and Laura Ann. The latter came from Conway for the weekend.

Those relatives and friends from out of town attending the Ed Brown funeral last Saturday included Mr. and Mrs. Ned Young of Laurel, Miss.; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wendling of Shreveport, La.; Mrs. Weldon Crawford, Mrs. Jolly Wilson, and Will Porterfield, all of Little Rock.

President Harry S. Truman on the grounds of youth and lack of experience.

With the world changed John said, "the next president is not going to be a talking or traveling president—he is going to be a working president."

In his formal statement, Johnson didn't once mention Kennedy by name.

Nor did he mention charges by Truman that the convention is being rigged in Kennedy's behalf. Last weekend he lined up with Truman on this.

Monday, Kennedy denied any effort to rig the convention and said he would do all he could to keep the convention open.

The presidential nomination, he said, "is not owed to anyone" and then announced what practically everybody already knew: "My name will be placed in nomination."

Johnson said that if he does not win the nomination he is prepared to support the party's choice "with all the vigor at my command."

In a question-and-answer session after the reading of his formal statement, Johnson said friends tell him he can expect "in excess of 500" delegate votes on the first ballot at the Los Angeles convention. Nomination requires 761 votes.

Asked to comment on charges by Americans for Democratic Action that he is a conservative who cannot win Johnson said he would expect ADA to be against him "and as a matter of fact I would not be very comfortable with their support."

How does he describe himself? "You don't go in for labels. I've been called almost everything."

"I've been progressive and liberal without being radical; conservative without being reactionary."

Johnson said he believes very strongly in the protection of every person's constitutional rights. He was replying to a question on his civil rights views.

Mrs. Knutson to Seek Office

OKLAHEA, Minn. (AP)—Cora Knutson says she will seek to regain the Minnesota congressional seat she lost two years ago following the "Cora, come home" campaign attributed to her husband.

The blonde ex-schoolteacher declared the "big lie" technique which she said caused her defeat two years ago.

She announced her candidacy in addressing a Fourth of July celebration in Okla. her home town.

Mrs. Knutson was defeated in 1958 by Rep. Odlin Langen, Republican. During the campaign much publicity was given a letter in which Mrs. Knutson's husband, Andy, urged his wife to leave Washington and resume their home life here.

Mrs. Knutson said the letter was inspired by political foes.

DOROTHY DIX

Doors Are Not Closed To The Unhappy

BY HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen Worden Erskine: I was 34 years old when, in 1947, I went to Czechoslovakia and married. When we came back I was three months pregnant. My husband is a tailor. We lived in slums. Rent $18 a month. He could have brought home $80 a week cash but said he would not be anybody's slave, so went into business for himself and brought home $30 a week, the difference between life and plain survival. We moved three times in two years. He lives for tomorrow and does not want to know that the children and I suffer. I am doing alterations to make it easier. He says to me "Work! Other women work." He has the thinking of an 18th century husband. So we fight and slowly destroy each other. I hate him. Only for my children's sake I stand by. All doors are closed. There is no way out. Miserable. Dear Miserable: If you "stand by" for your children's sake, then, for their sake, stop hating their father. This corrosive hatred which obsesses you both will scar their hearts and minds. If you love them, make an heroic effort to change your thinking. Never for one minute admit that all doors are closed. Prove that positive thought will open them. Love instead of hate. Rejoice in life. Be thankful, if only for a beautiful day. Live so that your children can truthfully say, "My mother is a wonderful woman." As surely as dawn follows darkness, the blessings you seek will be yours.

Dear Helen Worden Erskine: My 17-year-old daughter is stubborn, sarcastic and a show-off. These faults give her and those that love her many a headache. She goes to bed crying and wakes up crying. She's been going with a fine boy but they are now breaking up. She cries and says everything she does and says is wrong, but she keeps on making the same mistakes. This may be just a coincidence but, a few months after she and this boy started going together, I received a newspaper clipping. It said, "She is 15 and he is 20. They won't go together. You wait."

Send your problem to Helen Worden Erskine. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address her in care of this newspaper. (Released by The Bell Syndicate) several hours in signing tax extension-debt limit legislation for lion dollars for the new fiscal structure.

Improvements for Little Rock Field

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Airport Commission plans to spend about $300,000 for improvements if President Eisenhower signs a bill to clear the way for a bond issue to provide about half the funds.

Rep. Dale Alford (D-Ark) said yesterday that Congress passed a bill to remove a reapture clause under which the federal government could regain Adams Field in the event of an emergency. The clause, contained in an agreement giving the field to the city, prevented sale of bonds.

Denies Charges

LONDON (AP) - The Foreign Office today denied Soviet charges that West Germany is recruiting West Berliners for military service in violation of four-power occupation agreements. The Russian accusations were made Thursday in protest notes delivered in Britain, France and the United States.

Protests Speech

BRUSSELS (AP) - The Belgian press today expressed bitter anger at Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba's violent speech in front of King Baudouin at the independence celebrations in Leopoldville in which he denounced "colonialist excesses and Congolese sufferings."

Protests Speech

Under it, this country may veto the court's jurisdiction over a dispute in which the United States is involved, by holding it a purely domestic issue.

Protests Speech

President Eisenhower, Vice President Richard M. Nixon and the State and Justice Departments have asked repeal of the reservation. They claim it encourages other nations to deny the World Court jurisdiction and stands in the way of "the rule of law for settling international disputes."

Protests Speech

Opposing groups contend a repeal might give the court jurisdiction over disputes involving the Panama Canal, immigration and other matters. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 87 against bringing up the repeal at this session of Congress.

Protests Speech

But a subsequent controversy arose over another agreement still pending on the Senate calendar. This would waive the Connally reservation in disputes involving the law of the sea, ratified by the Senate May 20.

Protests Speech

This protocol was first ratified along with the four treaties in a single package, but it immediately was reconsidered because of the warner. When it was voted on separately, the pig vote in its favor was short of the necessary two-thirds majority needed for approval.

Protests Speech

Another motion to reconsider, offered on behalf of Fulbright, put it back on the Senate calendar.

Protests Speech

THE next scheduled tournament will be the Club Championship which will begin in August. Details concerning this tournament will be announced at a later date.

OLD TIMERS TO BE FETED — J. M. (Mac) Garland, retired Emmet merchant, shows Barbara Faulkner one of the old-fashioned saddles on display at Arkla Village, where Nevada-Hempstead Counties Old Timers' Day will be held Saturday, July 9.

Southwest Arkansas pioneers like Garland, who is 83 years young, will be honored during a full afternoon and evening of festivities, to which there will be no admission charge. These will include free buggy rides, an appearance in person of the famous Louisiana Hayride fiddlers, and gospel quartet contests, and the appearance of several dignitaries. Barbara works at the Chuckwagon Restaurant at Arkla Village. Garland, incidentally likes to relate that "I was born one hundred years after the Declaration of Independence."

Pirates Slay on Top of Loop the Hard Way

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates are on top after the July 4 firing for the first time in 24 years, riding a 4½ game lead that's the highest by any National League club has had at this stage in five seasons.

They have done it after:

1. Winning just three of their last 10 games.
2. Failing to get a victory from either of their two pitching aces in five starts between them, and
3. Blowing a five-run lead behind their No. 1 relief man.

So how?

Easy. Milwaukee's second-place Braves have lost eight of their last 12, and the third-place San Francisco Giants have won only five of their last 14.

The limping leaders split a doubleheader at Milwaukee Monday, blowing a five-run lead behind Bob Friend and Elroy Face as the Braves won the opener 7-6 in 10 innings. But the Braves took the second game 7-2 on a dandy six-hit job by southpaw Harvey Haddix.

The Giants won 4-0 at Chicago as Jack Sanford put away his second straight shutout with a four-hitter. Then the Cubs held them to a 1-1 tie in the nightcap, called after 14 innings because of darkness at Wrigley Field, the only park in the majors without lights.

St. Louis split with Los Angeles, winning 6-2 before a 5-4 loss. Philadelphia escaped the cellar by defeating Cincinnati 5-2, after the Reds took the opener 5-0 on a four-hitter by Jay Hook.

In the American League, the New York Yankees lost 9-3 at Washington in a single game and second-place Cleveland cut their lead to 1½ games by sweeping Kansas City 4-0 and 7-4. Third-place Baltimore lost 10-7, then won 8-6 at Boston. Detroit took two from the Chicago White Sox, 3-0 and 3-2.

Al Spangler's two-out single did it for the Braves in the 10th against Face (5-4), who had won five in a row. Warren Spahn (7-5) won it with three innings of hitless relief. Two-run homers by Bob Skinner and Dick Stuart helped build a 6-1 lead for Friend. Hank Aaron's 22nd home run, with one on, chased Friend in the eighth and Del Crandall's solo 12th homer tied it in the ninth against Face.

It was the first extra-inning game lost by the Braves in eight this season, but they bounced back as Haddix (5-4) pitched his first winning complete game against the Braves in 14 tries since Sept. 14, 1956. The little lefty, who lost a perfect game to Milwaukee last season, blanked the Braves on three hits over the last eight frames.

MORE

Three runs in the first inning won it for the Pirates, with Smokey Burgess hitting a two-run double off loser Joey Jay (2-4) before reliever George Brunet walked home the clincher.

Sanford (8-5) walked two and struck out five while taking over the major league lead with his fifth shutout. Willie Mays, extending his hit streak through 19

that's my ELECTRICCOOL kitchen!

A modern all-electric kitchen is a joy any season of the year, but in summertime it becomes one of the most pleasant spots in the entire home! Gloriously cool, the very ease of electric cooking keeps you fresh and unruffled, even if you have a party dinner ahead.

You see, only electric cooking keeps heat out of the air, and away from the cook, by concentrating it strictly on the utensils. And electricity, being pure power, never smudges pots and pans, walls and curtains. So to stay fresh as all outdoors this summer... cook the cool way... electrically!

Nominees to Be Put on Hot Spot

Editor's Note: William F. Arbogast, head of The Associated Press staff covering the House of Representatives, surveys prospects at the proposed post-convention session of Congress.

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP)—The post-convention session of Congress is certain to put presidential and perhaps vice-presidential nominees on a political hot spot.

Some tough political issues will face the Congress when it goes back into session in August, and some of the top nominees likely will be actively involved in solving them.

While they may not be swayed by the voter appeal in these issues, they certainly will be aware of it.

Presiding over the Senate will be Vice President Richard M. Nixon, an apparent shoo-in for the GOP presidential nomination. Serving as majority leader will be Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, whose voice is dominant in shaping Senate decisions. Also on the Senate scene will be Sens. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Stuart Symington of Missouri, who, with Johnson, are the current top contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In the House will be Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, who is spearheading Johnson's campaign and is in a strong position to put into effect any program the party's nominee, whoever he may be, decides to advocate.

Helping hammer out the GOP program in the House will be the minority leader, Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, who is available for the vice presidential nomination, as is one of his assistants, Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan.

In that kind of an atmosphere, politics is bound to be a dominant theme in the post-convention session.

Except for Nixon, the candidates can use the halls of the Senate and the House as political forums, and undoubtedly they will.

As a non-voting presiding officer of the Senate, Nixon theoretically is a neutral referee. He cannot even address the Senate without its permission. His power is limited to settling parliamentary differences and to voting in cases of ties.

But as the party's presidential nominee, Nixon will have difficulty avoiding statements of his views on such pending controversial matters as health care for the aged, housing, minimum wages, federal aid for education and other campaign topics on which Democrats and the Eisenhower administration are in sharp disagreement.

Freedom of Worship

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—Probably the largest Protestant gathering ever to meet in predominantly Roman Catholic South America voted Thursday night to oppose state-supported religion and reiterated its belief in the right of all men to choose their own way of worship.

The World Baptist Alliance, meeting 12,500 strong for its 10th Congress, unanimously adopted a "manifesto on religious liberty."

Hundreds of persons, many of them on horses as pictured above, attended the annual July 4 celebration at Washington yesterday. This is part of the parade held at 10 a.m. Many of the riders took part in a trail ride from Arkla Village at Emmet to Washington on July 3. The parade was a feature of the morning

Treasury in Black Thanks to Taxpayers

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Thanks mainly to the taxpayers, the U.S. Treasury is using black ink today as it closes its books for the fiscal year.

This is good news to all those who fear further monetary inflation—a mainspring for a rising cost of living, although there are other pressures, too.

Also the Treasury is going to borrow less new money in the coming next six months than in any second half for several years.

This is good news for all officers who want to borrow—state and local government agencies, corporations, and individuals. It means there will be less competition for the available funds—and perhaps somewhat easier borrowing terms.

The taxpayers get the major credit for the happier fiscal days in Washington because the Treasury is collecting more from individual income tax returns.

Part of this is because rising prices this year have meant larger tax withholding payments.

And returns filed by individuals have been running higher. Some think this is because of the drive to make taxpayers more conscientious about reporting dividend and interest receipts.

But the Agriculture Department has been doing its bit, too, to help gut the Treasury. Because of lower price support spending for corn and unusually heavy export sales of cotton, the Agriculture Department hasn't spent as much recently as earlier it had been expected to.

Although the books won't be tallied for several days yet, it now seems sure that budget revenues for the 12 months ending today will top the January estimate of 78.6 billion dollars, and federal spending will be a bit below the January estimate of 73.4 billion. Most guesses now put a budget surplus at 500 million dollars or better.

The Treasury late today will announce the terms of its first cash borrowing in the July-through-December period has run close to 10.2 billion.

If the Treasury taps the money market for four billion fewer dollars this fall and winter, the total will be just that much more for the borrowers to divide up between themselves.

The first days of the Congress now until next June will have a lot to major role too. It comes to determining how much of good and income tax cuts in a Treasury surplus can be divided into tax cuts to be implemented in the fiscal year. Spend if profits rise, or support bills are piled high on the income tax payment.

Prospects now are for the Treasury to sock about a 2 billion dollars in cash between July 1

TO THE VOTERS OF Hempstead County

Orie O. Byers

My opponent, in his opening speech in said that there is a rumor going that he is a "millionaire" leaving the inference that he has his money out of the Four (4) Terms — Eight Years as County Judge, and then stated that he is not a "Pauper" when he was first elected.

He did not say who started the rumor. I do know who started the rumor, if it was started, since he brought the matter up, I feel that the voters are entitled to know some of the facts.

I, therefore, made some effort to find out my opponent's financial condition. I learned when he was first elected County Judge, in the year of 1952, he assessed real estate in the County of value of $2,150. I also learned that he claimed Gin which seems to have been listed on the books as the Hope Gin Company, but did not who composed the Hope Gin Company.

I then investigated his tax assessment for year of 1959 and I found that he assessed estate at a value of $64,600.

I think, you, Mr. and Mrs. Voter, will fairly well for himself during the years he has your County Judge, and, naturally, I wonder he brought this matter up, as I had not heard rumor, but I do remember a saying that I heard quoted all of my life to the effect "THE GUILTY FLEE WHEN NO MAN PURSUETH."

Naturally I wonder why my opponent was disturbed about this matter.

IT IS TIME FOR A CHANGE.
